YOUR FIRST JOB

CHOOSING IT . . . GETTING IT . . . KEEPING IT!!!

Preparing to succeed in a career is one of the most important activities of your life. Here are some tips prepared by experts in the field of Personnel and Industrial Relations that can be of great help to you before you venture out into the business world.

All the answers aren't here. It's too complicated a subject. However, we know from experience that success on the job doesn't just happen. It's the result of preparation. This booklet is designed to help you prepare for a rewarding and successful future.

Your Future – A Major Decision

“SHOULD I CONTINUE MY EDUCATION?”

This is a question we all have to face up to at one time or another. We must all make the decision whether to continue through school or to go to work. This is a serious matter and deserves careful consideration. Here are some of the factors to consider:

REASONS FOR CONTINUING YOUR EDUCATION MIGHT BE:

1. Jobs are more plentiful if you have more training.
 - a. Of 85 jobs usually offered young people, only 23 do not require a high school diploma, and the 23 will decrease with the increasing complexity of the machine age.
 - b. Of young people who are unemployed, there are 50% more who are non-high school graduates than who are graduates.
2. The more education you have, the higher your income is likely to be.

REASONS FOR NOT CONTINUING YOUR EDUCATION MIGHT BE:

1. You need money to help the family, or to help send a brother or sister on to school.
2. Learning the things expected of you in school may be difficult.
3. School has already prepared you well for the kind of work you want to do.
4. Your parents question the value of a higher education for you.
5. You can get an education somewhere else — the military services, vocational schools, apprenticeship, and on-the-job training, or night school.

After you have added up all the advantages of going on for more education and all the advantages of leaving school, you may decide to take a job now. This step may seem like a big one. It may seem frightening, but it's just another interesting step in your journey through life.

You probably have had several jobs before. You may have made some money baby sitting, mowing lawns, working as a sales clerk, or boxing groceries at the market. But, somehow or other, this time you're a little more serious about the whole business. A new door is opening to a new world, a new way of living.

What Would You Like To Do?

A review of your education, interests, and work experience up to the present time will help you to make a good job choice. You have been getting ready for this step all your life.

Your counselor, teachers, parents and friends can all help you to consider this information about yourself. It's always safer to plan a course of action before you take it. You have to make your own decisions, but you can make a sounder decision if you have competent help.

Remember, work is fun when you feel you are in the right spot and when you are producing something. It gives you a feeling of independence. Sure, money is important. It buys some of the things you need to live a good life. But money will come as you succeed in your work, and you will succeed best at work you like.

What Job Is Best For You?

THERE IS ALWAYS A RIGHT PLACE FOR EVERYONE.

There are long-term occupational goals and immediate ones. For example, you may want to be an office manager eventually. More immediately you will need to get a job as a mail or file clerk. Jobs as car cleaner and service station attendant may lead to mechanical or sales positions.

Weigh long run advantages offered by jobs you are considering against immediate gains. Select a job that has promotional opportunities. On-the-job training is provided by some employers.

When it comes to looking for a job, your school counselor can probably help you. If you are a high school or college student, take advantage of the services provided by your school placement office. Other sources of job information and help are private employment agencies, the State Employment Development Department and Employers.

On the following page you will see an information sheet. This is for your own reference. Please take the time to fill it out as completely as possible. From this form you should be able to spot your qualifications and identify what you excel in:

How Do You Get The Job?

GETTING JOB LEADS:

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR PERSONAL CONTACT!

You can discover leads to the job you want by contacting these sources:

1. If in college, contact the college job placement office. They maintain files on many companies and can often arrange interviews for you.
2. High School Vocational or regular school counselors can recommend companies that have jobs requiring your particular skills and abilities.
3. Read the classified sections of local newspapers to learn where openings exist. Then apply through those companies.
4. Talk to your friends and neighbors. Let them know you are looking for work and the kind of work you prefer.
5. Register at State Employment Development Departments.
6. Advertise in the Situations Wanted Section of your local newspaper to let the public know you are available.

How To Get An Interview

One way to get an interview is to apply for the job by presenting yourself on paper in the form of a personal data sheet, usually called a resume.

A well prepared resume can be mailed to many employers without the time and cost required to visit each one personally. Your resume must represent you accurately and adequately. It may open the door to a personal interview.

There is no better way to write a resume than to fill in the following pages. They will give you an idea of the important points to include, as well as the format in which the information may be presented.

Typewritten resumes are acceptable but mimeographed or Xerox copies are better and less costly for multiple copies. The resume should be limited to one page if possible.

Cover letters are not required for resumes if they are mailed to companies in response to advertisements. However, it is wise to write a short letter to send with your resume if you are applying for a specific position.

Most employers do not acknowledge receipt of resumes unless qualified applicants for present or potential vacancies apply.

Gentlemen:

Your advertisement in today's PRESS interests me very much. I have always hoped when I finished college that I would be able to obtain a position in a small office. I feel the work is more varied than in a large office, and I enjoy the challenge of a variety of work.

On June 10, I'll be graduated from the Executive's Training Course at Santa Ana Junior College. In addition to my skills in Shorthand and Typing, I have had intensive training in Business Machines and a course in Business English that stressed correct grammar and spelling. Other business subjects I have had are listed in the enclosed resume.

I shall be ready to begin work on June 14, which is the Monday following Commencement. You may reach me at the college office or by calling my home, 557-8120. I will appreciate an interview at your earliest convenience.

Sincerely yours,
Joan Miller

Preparing For The Interview

MAKING THE INTERVIEW COUNT

Prepare for the interview.

This means that you have all factual information necessary for the job at hand, such as school and previous work records, social security card number, license, proof of age, character references and, if pertinent, special certificates and samples of your work.

You may wonder how you should dress. The answer is simple. Just dress appropriately for the kind of job you are applying for. But most important of all, be sure you are neat and clean.

Be prepared to answer questions about why you want to work for this company, and on your interests, part-time work experience and ultimate goals.

Go to the interview alone. This is not a time to be accompanied by a friend.

You will probably be asked to fill out an application. Be sure to answer all questions truthfully, write neatly and clearly, and above all, spell correctly.

The following list was compiled to give you confidence before going to the interview. Memorize these points as they are the main DO's and DON'Ts during the interview.

1. Do come to the interview fully prepared.
2. DO BE ON TIME, even ten minutes early. If detained, call ahead and try to set up another appointment.
3. Do go to the interview with confidence. If arranged by a counselor or agency you will be expected and your record reviewed.
4. Do bring extra copies of your resume. Make them available for any additional members of the interviewing board.
5. Do think before you speak and respond to all questions clearly and to the point.
6. Do be yourself — relaxed, and self confident.
7. Do be specific — not vague in your responses or statements.
8. Do LOOK directly at your interviewer as you speak or respond.
9. Do use discretion when speaking about former employers, their sales, secrets, management or employees.
10. Do inquire fully — at the proper time, and if it has not been volunteered — about the position, the company, opportunities, future plans. Don't just give the impression you know everything there is to know about this company.
11. Do thank the interviewer after the session — regardless of the outcome of the interview.

DON'TS

1. Don't load down your resume with details, explanations or unnecessary statements.
2. Don't leave gaps in your resume.
3. Don't talk too much during the interview. Doing so could indicate nervousness.
4. Don't repeat yourself. Doing so may reveal that you have nothing better to talk about concerning your possible job.
5. Don't go into working hours, vacation policies, holidays, sick leave, pensions, and similar fringe benefits. These will be discussed later in the interview.
6. Don't prolong the interview or attempt to get a positive commitment from the interviewer.

Your Conduct During The Interview

Be positive in your approach during the interview, and know what you want in a job. Be interested and alert. You will naturally be a little nervous. Try not to show it. One way to overcome nervousness is to be friendly and responsive.

Stress your qualifications for the job and your interest in it. Emphasize those subjects, work experience, or military experience which might make you more qualified for the job than the other person. Remember, you're more apt to undersell than oversell yourself.

Remember, the interviewer can only know what you communicate and how you appear by the way you dress and act and how you answer questions. You are a capable person, as able as anyone else to fill the job opening. To make a good impression during the interview, follow these summarized guidelines listed below:

1. Dress properly and neatly. Don't wear far-out fashions for the interview.
2. BE ON TIME.
3. Do NOT smoke.
4. Don't chew gum or fiddle with objects in your hands.
5. Don't wear dark glasses. Let the interviewer get a good look at you.
6. Know all the information on your resume so you can answer questions correctly and quickly.
7. Be flexible about the working conditions and hours.
8. Do not make bad comments about previous employers.
9. Talk about the experience which qualifies you for the job.
10. Go to the interview alone.
11. Thank the interviewer.

Now That You've Got The Job – How To Hold It And Get Ahead

So, now you have your first job and you think your worries are over. Well, they're not. It takes just as much effort to hold a job and advance as it did to get one — and this must be a continuing effort.

There are no easy rules to insure success on any job, and no one can guarantee your future. What you make of your job depends on YOU. You must continue to think, to plan, to prepare yourself, just as you did before you got the job.

You can get some ideas right now as to whether or not you will hold your job and get ahead. A great majority of people who fail to win promotional success or who lose their jobs or fail in business, do so because they cannot get along with other people.

It doesn't make any difference whether you are a shop or factory worker, office employee, salesperson, or in business for yourself. To be successful you must get along well with people — those you work for, those you work with, and those who work for you.

Most important of all, your success or failure depends on you. Like everything else, what you get out of a job depends on what you put into it. If you go to work with enthusiasm, convinced you can make a success of your job — with a willingness to work for that success — then you WILL be a success.
